Art students gather for classes on the various levels of the Memorial Library or, weather permitting, scatter across campus with drawing pads in hand. The rest of the campus had a chance to see the results of their labor at Student Exhibits and occasional art sales. This year's special events included Art Study Tours in Florence and New York during Spring terms and the construction of a new energy-saving kiln designed by Marvin Bartel.

COMMUNICA- TION

The Communication department means many activities that touch all of us. In addition to classes in speech, writing and drama, there are the Debate Club, plays, WGCS, the Record and the Maple Leaf. Over one tenth of the campus actively participates in these, without mentioning the much larger number that enjoys the by-products of their efforts.

The English department was busy sponsoring many activities and publications in addition to regular classes this year. A new publication, Broadside, with a one page format and featuring poetry or short stories was started. Four Pinchpenny Press books were published (Eating the Buds by Cynthia Habegger, The Mare Near You by Brendan Kennally, Peter Fallon and Nick Lindsay, Green Squirrel & Other Rhymes for Children by Samuel Witmer and Finding Buddy Bolden: The First Man of Jazz by Donald Marquis) and a number of poetry workshops were held, with poets like Gwendolyn Brooks and Peter Fallon. One student, Deborah Dahlke-Scott, worked on a year long project on "Land Use Ethics . . . Voices From the Limberlost," under the guidance of John Fisher.

Music expression takes on many forms around campus. Musicians can participate in Chamber Choir or Chorale, Orchestra or Jazz band. Piano pedagogy involves young students from the community, while training teachers. Senior and departmental recitals, concerts, special events like Concerto-aria contest, the Bach Festival and Music Week keep the campus ringing with music all year round. This year's Concerto-aria winners were Brent Weaver, Dave Breckbill, Phil Beachy, Deb Bixler and John Gingerich.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE

Many of us come into contact with foreign languages because of SST. Others study French, Spanish, or German in greater depth, becoming aware of themselves and their culture through knowledge of the variations in another. Junior year abroad participants were Brian Roth — Strasbourg, John Liechty — Barcelona, Tom Kreider, Sharon Hodgkins and Maryann Harder — Marburg.

Math students were busy finding limits, integrating functions, and above all, proving every step of the way. They also had opportunity to run programs on the computer, testing their skills in BASIC.

HISTORY and POLITICAL SCIENCE

Students pored over details from different periods of history, while striving to maintain a clear idea of the broader picture. Poli Sci students studied the functioning of nations and looked at specific political situations.

Chemistry students underwent the usual trials of labwork as they concentrated on experiments and hoped for the right reaction and an end product that wouldn't evaporate, blow up or disintegrate. An Atomic Absorption Spectrophotometer was purchased with the aid of a matching grant from the National Science Foundation.

CHEMISTRY

SOCIOLOGY, SOCIAL WORK, PSYCHOLOGY

Psychology and sociology majors spread into the community with practicums, questionnaires and experiments. The Social Work department put students in field placements in a number of local organizations and put a great deal of time into seeking accreditation.

Biology students look for the "meaning of life" in a different way than the saying usually brings to mind. Classes identified, classified, dissected, and in the case of Marine Biology, got a good tan. Research activities continued with cells and Merle Jacobs' fruit flies.

HOME ECONOMICS

Encompassing more than the basic traditional skills of cooking and sewing, the Home Ec department also explored areas of home management, consumer concerns and nutrition education. Cultural understanding was attempted through the study of a society's customs regarding foods and clothing design.

BUSINESS and ECONOMICS

The Business and Economics departments are expanding. A Chair in Economics was established and the business department moved out into the community, providing students with on-the-job experience in the field. The fourth annual Small Business Management Seminar was held in April.

BIBLE, RELIGION, PHILOSOPHY CENTER FOR DISCIPLESHIP

Bible and Religion majors dealt with faith issues and struggled towards a workable theology. Philosophy classes studied the history of human thought and did some thinking on their own. The Center for Discipleship held a number of forums exploring issues, needs, possibilities and problems involved in Christian vocation.

EDUCATION

Another of the large departments, Teacher Education provides training for kindergarten, elementary, junior high and high school teachers-to-be. Student teachers tried their skills in local schools and worked on various projects on campus.

Nursing is one of the largest departments and one of the most demanding. Four years of dedicated study and work in hospital and community culminated in the graduation of this year's 48 seniors. Underclassmen remain behind to continue with the work of assisting in public schools, training at Elkhart and Goshen Hospitals, and, of course, studying.

SST (study — service trimester) means something different to all of us. Those of us who have been there have our own images, glowing or gloomy depending on our experiences. Those of us who haven't gone yet look forward to it with excitement and apprehension. It can mean mud, rain, getting lost, illness, and homesickness. It can mean the thrill of finally understanding what Mario has been explaining, of making new friends, of seeing new places, of being forced to think of things that never touch our awareness at home. It means a lifetime of experiences, impressions, and people packed into three months in a foreign country.

The fall play presented by the Goshen College Players was actually five different one-act plays: "Aria da Capo" by Edna St. Vincent Millay, "The Happy Journey" by Thornton Wilder, "Impromptu" by Tod Moseley, "The Long Christmas Dinner" by Thornton Wilder, and "The Ugly Duckling" by A. A. Milne. This made it possible to involve many more people than a single play, giving opportunity for many new faces to tread the boards.

BLIZZARD OF '78

On January 25, GC weather observer Jim Sweigard was overheard wishing for another three inches of snow, to top the previous January snowfall record. His hopes were amply fulfilled as more than twenty inches fell in the next 48 hours. For the first time in the history of the college, classes were canceled because of snow. Students battled their way to the cafeteria through three foot drifts. Campus and community gradually dug their way out, with over two hundred GC students helping clear driveways for elderly or disabled people, working in the hospital, or offering their aid in other ways.

COMPANY OF WAYWARD SAINTS

The Goshen College Players' winter play was "A Company of Wayward Saints" by George Herman. It is the story of a company of comedians who improvise their plays around the barest thread of an idea. They are given an opportunity to earn their way home by performing "the History of Man." Unfortunately, their squabbles and disagreements keep ruining their scenes. Everything falls apart. Slowly, repantly, they begin again, with the history of a man — birth, adolescence, marriage, death. In the process they learn the truth and reality hidden in the roles they play. More than this, they again learn to work together, in the end more important even than earning their way home.

The end of the winter trimester saw a three day festival honoring the music of Johann Sebastian Bach. College, alumni, and guest musicians presented a number of works at solo recitals and orchestra and choir performances. The culmination of the weekend was the three hour long performance of the St. Matthew Passion, involving two choirs, two orchestras and seven soloists.

GRADUATION

The faculty

The traditional post-grad picture time.

On Sunday afternoon, April 16, two hundred and fifty-one students participated in Goshen's 80th Annual Commencement. A 1952 GC graduate, Paulos Mar Gregorios, metropolitan of Delhi and principal of the Orthodox Seminary at Kottayam, Kerala, India, presented the commencement address on "Quality." Forty-eight Bachelor of Science degrees in Nursing, one B.S. in Education and one hundred and nine Bachelor of Arts degrees were conferred by President Burkholder.

Dear John,

It's summer already and for the first time in a long time I am not eagerly anticipating another enriching year at that tabernacle of higher learning called college. Instead I fall asleep at night clutching my degree in academicology, all the while muttering chants to ward off the recall of my four years of hard labor (one night I dreamed they found I was three credit hours short and couldn't graduate until the year 2000). I was sorry to hear about all the problems you encountered at S.Y.N. Tech, but who told you over and over that such inhumane courses as Biblical Drama (As the Bible Turns), Great Ideas (Absurd Notions), Aesthetic Experience (Pathetic Exuberance) and Good Society (Mediocre Living on Clay Street) would never transfer as pre med credits?

However, I forgive your foolish disregard for good advice. Since Goshen has helped me to grow as a thinking, feeling person — secure in my faith, open to new experiences, and comfortable in relationships with others, I will employ my international understanding garnished by a wide assortment of peace and reconciliation skills to offer you a few glimpses of the great year you missed here. (Wouldn't I be a great candidate for revamping the college catalogue?)

The school year started out with the all too familiar couplet of raging humidity and bewildered frosh. The heat gradually dissipated, not so for the frosh. In fact, it was the first year that I-group leaders implemented leader dogs for campus orientation. But, by the end of the year, every once and awhile you'd realize that these once timid creatures were well on their way to being the boisterous sophomores of tomorrow.

We had our usual fare of on-campus entertainment in the way of movies that could be reviewed beforehand on TV, roller skating parties for those with Menn Youth Corps background, volleyball tournaments for both the jock and the klutz, jigsaw puzzle contests for those with above normal hand to eye coordination, card tournaments for those who had been allowed to play Euchre in church, jazz band, choir, and orchestra concerts for those with perfect pitch, and the all new idea of dorm coffee houses. Remember that when I speak of college parties they're different from the ones you so vividly write about (the only time I felt smashed was when a six four, two hundred and sixty pound freshman flattened me at a roller skating party. Since then I've given up roller skating for health reasons). Although there was almost always an event on the college calendar for the weekend (even if it was only the topic of Arnold Roth's sermon), students complained about nothing to do. But somehow, when the alternative is studying, something always seems to come up.

A major complaint is the social scene here. I don't know what there is to complain about; no one has ever done anything. Actually, people have to learn that a date isn't equated with engagement rings, but rather is a means of getting to know more people than the swell guys who stack pop cans in front of your door at four o'clock in the morning. At college the best resource is people — all those walking, talking, feeling individuals who are the same age, share some common ideas and aspirations and don't enjoy watching "The Return of the Pink Panther" alone any more than you do. Although some seniors did panic this year, I kept a cool head and played hard to get. That was until I realized that if I kept up such nonsense I never would be got. Some accused me of preying on innocent freshwomen, but to such one can only answer "no comment."

Grab a seat — change is taking place here. After an experimental trial of a new open house policy, new hours were adopted before the end of the winter tri. Some thought the rationale was that students would be too busy cramming for finals to use open house hours anyways. At least the new hours change open house from a zoo atmosphere to more of the sort of dropping in to see a friend that it should be.

Another change was student government. GCCC had mixed expectations, and developed as a sounding board that created committee after committee on anything from raunchy yearbook pictures to flying Old Glory. The lack of political science majors and the fervor of the turbulent sixties added to both student and faculty apathy. One successful venture was the "No More War Week" which focused on the catastrophic absurdities of the manufacture and accumulation of armaments in the world. I don't see how anyone that is in the least concerned about life can ignore such an important cause.

Let us not forget the realm of sports — Goshen is fast becoming a world soccer power. After a slow start our boys got it together and ended up in sunny (?) Alabama for a Thanksgiving treat. Another amazing feat was the second place finish of the eleven man track team (think what they could have done in baseball!). Along with all the women's sport successes Goshen will soon replace Notre Dame as the Sports Illustrated capital of Indiana.

I don't want to appear rude, but are you totally immune to national news? Of course we got snow here. Roof leaping became a campus pastime (it wasn't until the first term thaw that some of the missing leapers were found) and rumor had it that a group of pros had gathered together to build a big boat with runners, while Frank Bishop and Jon Roth were raising weather resistant huskies. The snow afforded students a study break and a chance to meet neighbors via a snow shovel. Then came the coal strike which brought out wool sweaters and helped create that romantic dining atmosphere that the most chic restaurants offer. The halls were so dark that one morning I had four close encounters of a third kind before I even hit the bathroom door.

Along with spring came perhaps the ultimate event for myself and my colleagues this year — graduation. It isn't as glorious as it sounds, because along with a BS or BA degree come accumulated debts, job uncertainties, grad school acceptance waits and alumni donation mail. However, such obstacles are overcome by the chance to put to practice in some form or another the concepts and notions we have weaved together. I sure wish I had another two years to go like you do, you guppie.

Well, has my letter convinced the prodigal boy to come home? You know John, with a last name of Yoder, there really is no other place for you. Drop me a line sometime — but don't give me one — summer school can't be that fun.

Your buddy,

Charlie Frei

The following is a tribute to Bettie Norman, written by fellow music professor Lon Sherer and originally published in the Record.

Bettie Norman, assistant professor of music since 1962, died February 16 at Goshen Hospital. She had been ill with cancer for eleven years.

She held a master's degree in string pedagogy, and, for several years, taught part-time in the Goshen Public Schools, where she sparked much enthusiasm for string playing.

After learning of her illness, she found it necessary to stop her public school work, but found energy to work extensively in music with the children of the College Mennonite Church. She also served as music teacher and orchestra director for Bethany Christian High School for one year.

I am struck by how little such a recital of facts conveys about the essence of a life that touched many of us so poignantly.

Bettie was a friend and colleague for all seasons. You could laugh or cry with Bettie, for she was one of those lovely people with insight, empathy, and sensitivity.

She did much for the music education area of our major, giving it quality that was ahead of its time in the music schools of the 1960's. She was a fine teacher, imaginative and thorough, but blessed with the ability to say even the hard things with a soft touch.

She was extraordinary in the way she related to people. So many, from very young to very old, considered her a special friend.

Bettie leavened the music department with her ideas and her presence. Many have mentioned her sense of humor, and certainly she had that. She could be outrageously funny. I don't mean that she was a clown; that wasn't her style, but her vision of life's absurdities was at least 20-20.

More than that, however, it seemed to me that her cheerfulness and irrepressible good humor permeated our department and altered the texture of relationships. To function in such a way through eleven long years of chemotherapy seemed remarkable at the time. Somehow, in retrospect, it seems much more so.

I am grateful for the years of life that were given to her since her illness. They have been rich for all of us who loved her. We saw her falter, and then continue to grow professionally, spiritually, and in self-knowledge.

Her faith was deep and mature. It allowed her increasingly more freedom to be herself, without artifice and without undue fears. I think that Bettie really enjoyed being Bettie — in all of that complexity that was teacher, colleague, and friend. She brought such zest to it.

When Bettie died, many noticed the evidence of faith that allowed her to die with such peace. I want to remember even more the evidence of faith that allowed her to live life with such uncommon grace.

Jill Liechty, 25, formerly a counselor in the admissions office, died Friday, September 23, at her home in Grabill, Indiana. She had been ill with cancer about nine months. A member of the North Leo Mennonite Church and a graduate of Anderson College, Jill worked for Goshen College until her illness was discovered last February. The following is a tribute to Jill, written by President J. Lawrence Burkholder and originally published in the Record.

When Jill Liechty joined our admissions staff as a counselor in 1975, it was evident that she was an unusual young woman. Her slight "theatrical" or, should I say, "evangelical" manner disguised a timid, but joyful spirit. Since she had not attended Goshen College, she needed to study Goshen's educational philosophy and theology. This she did but it is clear that as she presented the college to prospective students, she did so with an enthusiasm which was as much a part of her personality as what she represented.

Last winter when, following surgery, it became evident that her cancer was terminal, she brought to consciousness elements of faith which were implicit within her from her adolescence. She amazed her family and friends by her resignation to death. She refused the logic of Job's "friends" who saw a necessary correlation between God's goodness and her health or between her faith and miraculous healing.

She recognized that one legitimate and necessary definition of faith is response to the inexplicable. She did not deny the mystery or horror of death — the loss of vocational fulfillment, life with family and friends, skiing, fishing, having fun, and the richness of a full life span. This she accepted, not in stoic resolve, but in faith that the mystery of her death may be swallowed up in a larger mystery of grace.

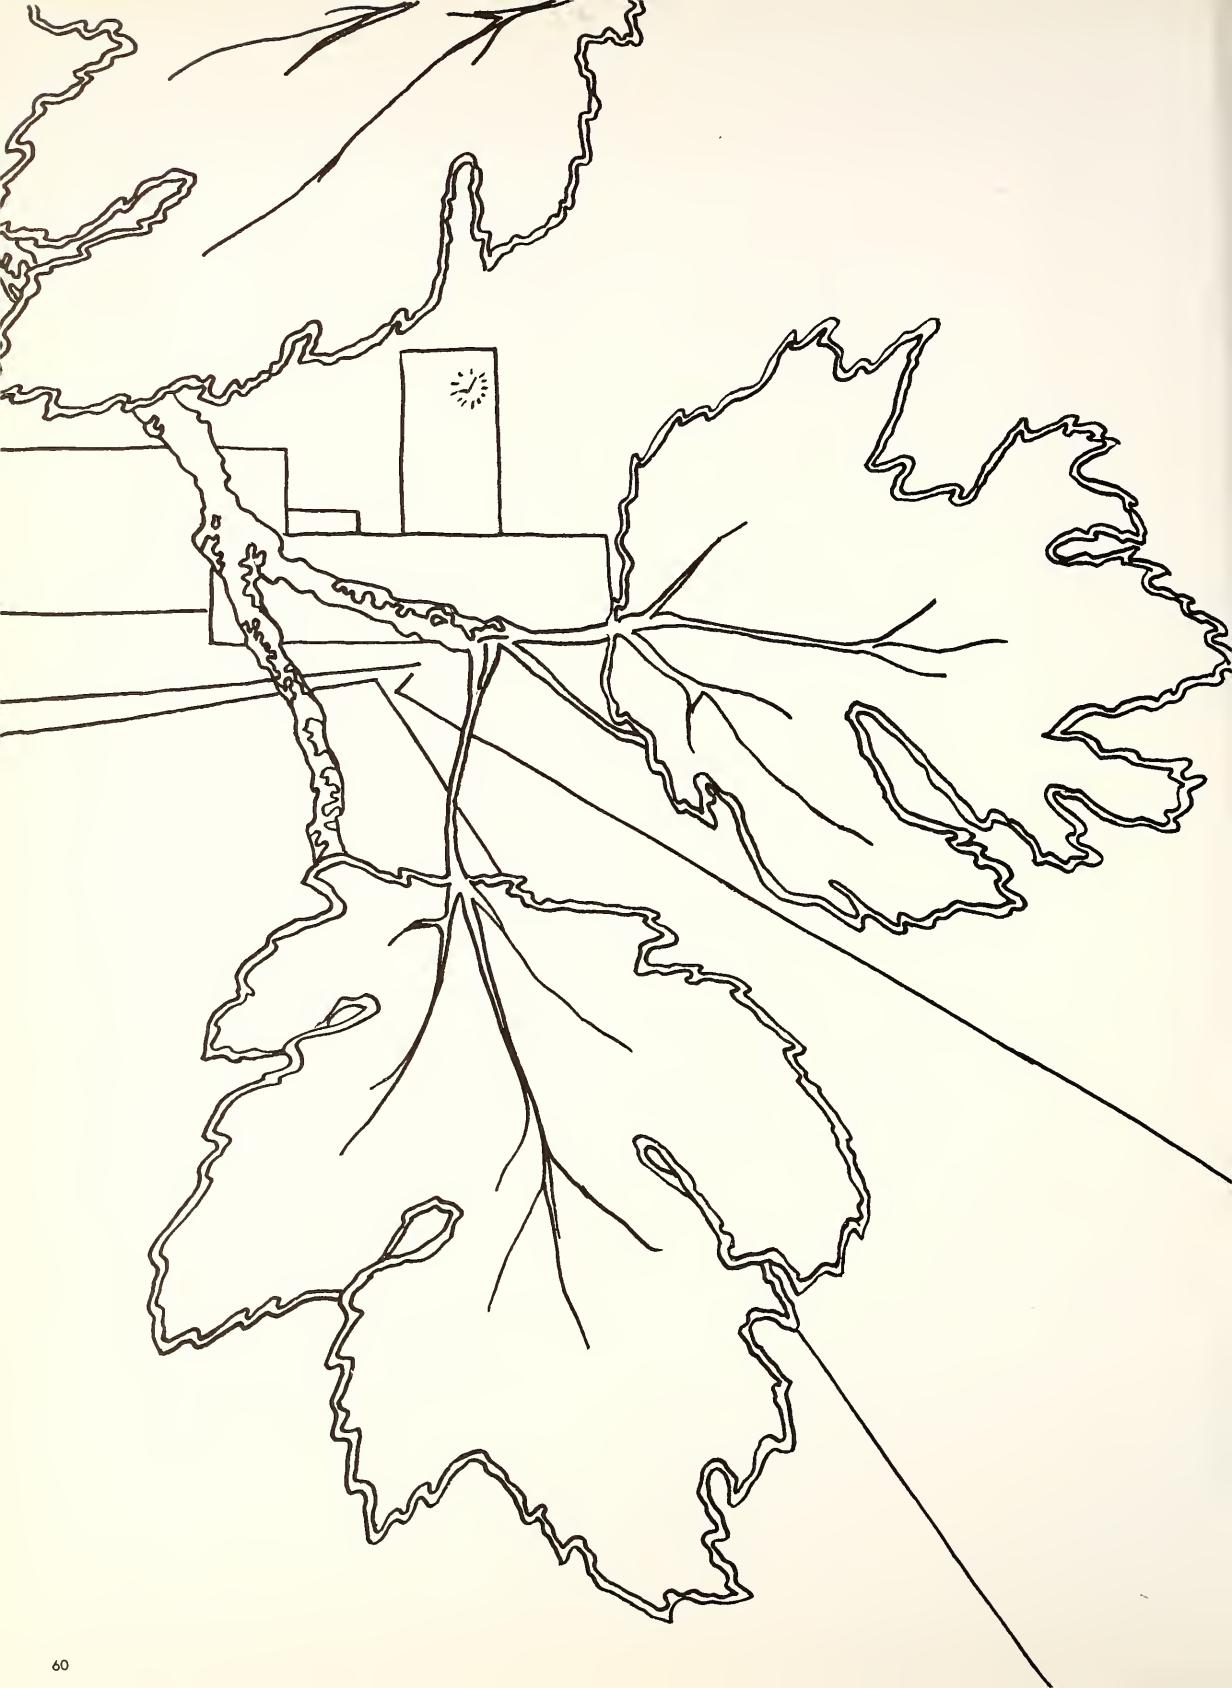

Jill spoke of God and Jesus Christ with confidence and immediacy. She was familiar with God but her talk was not stereotyped. Her language was not calculated as it often is to demonstrate her orthodoxy or to ingratiate herself with friends. She spoke what she believed and what she felt. She spoke with authority and not as those who live for social acceptance.

During her last weeks, Jill became a prophetess. Her impending death enabled her to see life from the standpoint of eternity. She saw through the values of her generation, the superficiality of manners, and the short-sightedness of those who strive frantically for material wealth. Her witness contained a strong element of loving judgment.

As her strength waned, her ability to transcend this world increased. Her statements about the fragility of life and the limits of existence reminded one of the thoughts of Pascal and Kierkegaard. Although Jill would be the last to claim sophistication, her final reflections embodied some of the finest insights of the prophetic tradition of the Old Testament and the existentialist philosophies.

Her small, handmade wooden coffin, prepared by a friend at her request, was her last testimony to Him who became poor that through His poverty we may become rich.

"Congratulations Class of 78"

"This is the beginning of a new day. God has given you this day to use as you will. You can waste it — or use it for good, but what you do today is important, because you are exchanging a day of your life for it! When tomorrow comes, this day will be gone forever, leaving in its place something that you have traded for it. May it be gain, and not loss: good, and not evil; success, and not failure; in order that you shall not regret the price you have paid for it."

Best Wishes for a Good Life.

Sincerely,
V. H. Steury, President
